

Tips for Remote Teaching

1 Be Flexible with Your Expectations

Remember that neither you nor your students will be as productive as usual. Set achievable short-term goals and objectives.

2 Set a Consistent Routine

Consider implementing a weekly routine for learning activities so that students and parents will always know what to expect.

3 Consistently Organize Learning Materials

Always provide announcements, content, learning activities, and assessments in the same location.

4 Communicate Regularly

Let families know how they can contact you. Set expectations for when and how you will communicate and provide feedback.

5 Model Digital Citizenship

Provide technology and netiquette guidelines. Include resources for your students and parents, and model appropriate behaviors.

Grounded in the Jesuit values of social justice, education, and service, our mission is to prepare innovative thinkers, learners, and leaders in the field of educational technology.

MORE THAN READY.
LOYOLA READY.

School of Education